

Keynote speech 17 October 2019

An Interdisciplinary Research on the Development and Social Implementation of a New Tool for Tsunami Evacuation Drill

Pr. Katsuya YAMORI

DPRI, KYOTO UNIVERSITY (JAPAN)

Katsuya YAMORI obtained his Ph. D. from Osaka University, Japan in the field of social psychology. He worked as Associate Professor at Department of Social Research, Nara University for 12 years (1992-2003) before he served as Associate Professor at Disaster Prevention Research Institute, Kyoto University for 6 years (2004-2009). Currently he is working as Professor at DPRI, Kyoto University. His fields of interest are disaster risk communication, disaster reduction education, and disaster information studies. He is also involved in several committees at the national and local level in Japan regarding disaster management. He received the Norio Okada Implementation Science Award from IDRiM Society in 2018.